

Hip-Hop Artist Tupac 2Pac Interviewed by Davey D

Written by Davey D ID2736
Thursday, 15 June 2006 19:05 -

This interview was conducted back in 1991 between Davey D and Tupac Shakur. This was before Tupac (2Pac) became the hip-hop icon figure he was destined to be.

This is just around the time Tupac (2Pac) finished filming Juice. Not yet the iconic figure in hip-hop, the young rap artist touches upon a lot of topics ranging from the young black male, police brutality, including the beat down he took by the Oakland Police Department), to politics and get this he even talks about a future bi-coastal war if Hip Hoppers don't check their egos.

The young hip-hop artist, Tupac, spoke about what it was like being a rebel of the Underground and the future challenges facing Hip-Hop including regional beefs. He also talked about his plans to work with young people via the Underground Railroad.

We also catch a humorous side of Pac where he continues his mother joke war with fellow hip-hop artist Money B. The two constantly would cap on each others moms during interviews. Pac got Money B in this interview.

powered by ODEO

This interview was conducted back in 1991 just around the time 2Pac finished filming Juice.. he touches upon alot of topics ranging from police brutlaity to politics and get this he even talks about a future bi-coastal war if Hip Hoppers don't check their egos....

powered by ODEO

Here's pt 2 of this 3 part interview with the late 2Pac....

powered by ODEO

Here's part 3 of this rare unreleased interview