Rare Appearance of Theologian James Cone on The Black Coffee Program with Cedric Muhammad

Theologian James Cone: "What Does It Mean To Be A Black Christian And A Black American?"

In a rare and riveting appearance, Dr. James Cone of Union Theological Seminary (<http://www.utsnyc.edu/NETCOMMUNITY/Page.aspx?&pid=353>) appeared on the December 5th edition of "The Cedric Muhammad and Black Coffee Program," the popular talk-show featured weekly at The Black Coffee Channel (<http://www.blackcoffechannel.com/>).

Professor Cone discussed the relationship between the Black Power Movement and Black Liberation Theology; the influence of Reverend Martin Luther King and Minister Malcolm X; Albert Cleage; the relationship between the Christian Cross and the history of Black Lynching; and the intersection of Islam, Christianity, Marxism and Socialism.

"We are honored to feature the appearance of such a critically important voice and thinker in Black America. I am convinced that the problems in Black culture, economics, and politics cannot be adequately addressed until the issue of religion, spirituality and theology are placed front and center, not in a strident manner, but in a carefully thought out, broad-minded and historically-rooted discussion. There are few individuals more qualified than Professor James Cone to lead us into such an important activity. Whether one is a Christian, Agnostic, Atheist, Muslim, Deist, or Hebrew, Professor Cone's presentation is accessible, non-dogmatic, and intelligent. His interview on Black Coffee Channel should be studied by all - especially those at Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs), Seminaries, and institutions of religious training and teaching - Mosques, Churches and Synagogues, to name a few," Cedric Muhammad stated of the interview's importance.

Dr. James Cone's interview can be heard in the archive section of "The Cedric Muhammad and Black Coffee Program," dateline "Dec. 05, 2007 Show" :
