Nancy Wilson, Tupac Shakur (2Pac), Michelle Wright, Joe and Gary Barlow, he's written for them all. Now, after creating hits across genres, recording artist J. Phoenix comes out swinging on his own on July 29, 2008 with his first single, "For The People," and the official release of his highly-anticipated debut album, MASTERPIECE (From The Soul Music), available word-wide at iTunes, Amazon, eMusic, Rhapsody, Ruckus, CDBaby, and a host of other digital retailers.

"For The People," is produced by The Heatmakerz, the phenomenal Hip Hop team known for their work with hip hop notables Cannibus Cam"ron, Lil Flip, and Lil Wayne. The high-spirited, infectious song has recently enjoyed more than 7,000 plays online and is called "a winner and real crowd pleaser with good melodies and a great message" by the A&R team at Taximusic.com.

"This song is about getting people back to happy, and reminding them that regardless of how the world is changing our souls never die," J. Phoenix says. "Ultimately, for me, music is about healing. That's my goal always", he adds.

J. Phoenix has been likened to Jill Scott for his vibe, Anthony Hamilton for his soulful delivery, Eric Benet for his vibrato, Seal for his diversity, and Avant for his lyrical approach to romance. Music insiders and J. Phoenix's global fan base have already placed their seals of approval on MASTERPIECE. David McKinney at Music-Reviewer.com says "...the entire album is one of the most well-written I've heard in a long time;" and the staff at Indie-Music.com describes Masterpiece as an album of "excellent production, great vocals, nice grooves, quality songs!" "J . Phoenix 's CD is a Masterpiece," is how Soultrack.com sums it up.

J. Phoenix is currently performing in Europe and will embark on a U.S. tour in 2009.

About Masterpiece

Inspired by such classic soul artists as Marvin Gaye, Curtis Mayfield and Bill Withers, MASTERPIECE adds to a musical landscape that persists long after other songs cease to be heard. The result is lyrics addressing everything from the power of individuals to make a difference ("Heart of a Soldier"), to heartbreak ("Just Another Memory") to the negative views often directed toward African-American men ("Just Like You" and "Maybe One Day").

Other highlights from MASTERPIECE include "Sweet Freedom," a song with strong crossover appeal, described by an A&R as "far from amateur with an organic quality, from the vocal performance to the music, a much needed break from the sexually driven songs that dominate the market." Two of the album's ballads, "Hate To Love You" and "Money Don't Mean A Thing" are also showing strong. The groove driven "Hate to Love You" entered the Indie-Music.com R&B chart as an editor's pick, rose to #2 and holds steady in the top 20. The sultry and soulful "Money Don't Mean A Thing," won a Northeast Region championship at OurStage.com and was voted among the top 10 R&B songs by OurStage.com artists. The rock-driven "Heart Of A Soldier" and mellow "Conversation" are also touted as hits.

J. Phoenix co-executive produced MASTERPIECE with long-time collaborator Gary Haase, known for his work with such artists as Celine Dion, Chaka Khan, Randy Brecker and Michael
