Released by Blak Ice Records, Third Degree, who hails from South Central Los Angeles, grew up living right around the corner from Dub C of Westside Connection.

"My raps give people another view of Los Angeles. People who don't live here think it's all either gangbanging or Hollywood. L.A. is not all about being a gangsta. I just wanted to make this record about the regular person in L.A, he concedes. Third believes there's a lot of pressure to rap about banging, because some of the earlier great L.A. rappers before them.

This album is uniquely different and a fresh change from what has become the standard. Check this one out for a nice different joint.
