Saigon, one of hip-hop's most talked about new rap artists, adds another notch on his list of notable accomplishments with an appearance on HBO's super popular new series Entourage.

The show which is said to be a hit along the lines of other popular HBO series like The Sopranos and Sex In The City, depicts the life of "Vince," the newest "it" actor in Hollywood and his 3 friends from back home in Queens who are along for the ride.

In addition to being featured in three episodes, 5 of the incredible new MC turned actor's songs were used in making the show as well, including the certified street-banger "Come Again," a "Letter P" remix by Just Blaze and even his remix to Nas' "War" which he will perform on season finale on September 4

Rap artist Saigon, poised to be hip-hop's next icon, is no stranger to the TV as the artist who's debut album is touted as one of the years most anticipated by XXL magazine was recently featured on MTV's You Hear It First. Meanwhile, Saigon is hard at work on his soon to be classic debut album, The Greatest Story Never Told, executive-produced by Just Blaze, set for release on Fort Knocks / Atlantic Records.
