Hip hop musical genius Ludacris, aka Chris Bridges, is back with his newest solo album, "RELEASE THERAPY," slated for release on September 26, 2006. The 1st single, "Money Maker," has scored the # 1 MOST ADDED on hip hop and rap radio with 54 adds and over 14 million in audience.

RELEASE THERAPY is Ludacris' most personal album to date. Dealing in topics ranging from politics to child abuse, the "release" portion of the disc will show another side of the hip hop genius Ludacris to his fans. The "therapy" songs include cut loose tracks such as "Gone Wild" also produced by Pharrell.

"Music is therapeutic," commented Ludacris. "When I say Release Therapy, I just mean in what I do and speaking out. It is my release therapy, music, period. Every album I get more and more personal, start talking about issues that people would be surprised about or maybe didn't think I would say. I'm about to release."

Ludacris will soon be seen performing his newest single in support of RELEASE THERAPY, in a 30 minute special on the E! Network and on Late Night with David Letterman.

After just making dozens of appearances in Hollywood and diligently working on his new album, the hip hop star still makes time for a cause close to his heart, The Ludacris Foundation. Just recently the hip hop artist raised over $25,000 for the foundation by Luda's participation in several high profile events including the GM Auto Fashion Show hosted by NBA Champion Shaquille O'Neal, a Vanity Fair photoshoot sponsored by Moet Chandon entitled "Fun and Fabulous" Hollywood, in which a sizable donation was made to Cris' foundation for his participation and finally at Zo's summer groove in Miami a special performance raised additional money towards Luda's foundation.
