

The Inc Trial Over More Hip-Hop Court Drama Coming

Written by Robert ID2161

Saturday, 03 December 2005 02:50 -

With The Inc. trial finished and Irv and Chris Gotti being acquitted, the next big hip-hop / rap related trial to look forward to will be that of rap artist Young Buck, member of hip-hop click G-Unit.

After many delays, the G-Unit rapper has a court date of December 12th for the stabbing of Jimmy James Johnson at last years Vibe Awards in Los Angeles. The stabbing allegedly occurred during an altercation with Jimmy James Johnson attacking rap artist and hip-hop producer Dr. Dre at the taping of the awards show last November.

Young Buck, rap artist from Tennessee, is charged with assault with a deadly weapon in the attack and has pleaded not guilty to the charges at his arraignment.

WKRN TV Nashville is reporting an agreement has been reached in the case but details will not be provided until the December 12th court date.

But David Darnell Brown aka Young Buck will have an encore performance on January 26th when he and fellow hip-hop artist Lloyd Banks will be in court to address gun possession charges in New York.

Chris Lloyd aka Lloyd Banks and David Darnell Brown aka Young Buck were arrested back in August in New York after a concert at Madison Square Garden, They were on the Anger Management 3 tour, which starred fellow rappers Eminem and 50 Cent.

So the outlook for hip-hop court cases looks good for all those who can't get enough of hip-hop court drama.

The Inc Trial Over More Hip-Hop Court Drama Coming

Written by Robert ID2161

Saturday, 03 December 2005 02:50 -
