Hip-hop rap artist and G-Unit member Young Buck, had his court pushed back by more than three weeks. The court date is in connection with a scuffle at the Vibe Awards.

The G-Unit member's day in court was set for Monday, but it has now been rescheduled for May. This marks a second delay, after a March court date was booked for April 18, for the rap artist.

Young Buck, real name David Brown; has pleaded not guilty to attacking Jimmy James Johnson with a knife at the Santa Monica, California awards ceremony in November.

Brown allegedly attacked Johnson when the latter punched hip-hop rap icon Dr. Dre after he refused to sign an autograph.

The rapper, who is free on bail, faces an eight year jail sentence if he's convicted.
