Being no stranger to controversy now on the cover of the new Rolling Stone magazine, due to hit newsstands January 27th, is a picture of hip-hop rap artist Kanye West wearing a crown of thorns with "blood" streaming down his face.

The article, "The Passion of Kanye West," reveals the Grammy nominated hip-hop artist Kanye West's personal reflections on a range of subjects.

Catholic League president Bill Donohue released the following comments on the article today:

"At first glance, it appears that both Kanye West and Rolling Stone are equally culpable of misappropriating Catholic iconography. But on closer inspection, it looks like Rolling Stone deserves the lion's share of the blame."

"West is a young rapper who is hard to peg. On the one hand, he eschews gangsta rap and likes to sing lyrics like, 'They say you can rap about anything except Jesus/That means guns, sex, lies, videotapes/But if I talk about God, my record won't get played.' On the other hand, he is capable of saying plainly foolish things, e.g., the government is responsible for the spread of AIDS among blacks and gays."

"If it is true that West is a morally confused black young man, it is also true that Rolling Stone is staffed by morally challenged white veterans: they are to West what white boxing agents in the 20th century were to black boxers—rip-off artists. It is not for nothing that West poses as a Christ-like figure on a magazine geared to whites. To top it off, the white readership is bound to get a kick out of knowing that the 'The Passion of Kanye West' is the rapper's self-confessed passion for pornography."

"Is Rolling Stone as racist as it is anti-Catholic? Hard to say, but one thing's for sure: it will only be offended by the former charge."
