Late rap artist ODB's Dirty Bastard fans will have a chance to intersect with his hip-hop legacy by entering the contest "ODB Forever: the Remix Project."

Fans can download an a cappella vocal track of the song "Dirty Dirty" and use it as source material for a remix. The new version can then be uploaded to the Web site of the Damon Dash Music Group, which will release ODB's posthumous album.

A panel of judges, including Wu-Tang Clan mastermind RZA, Dash and DJ Clark Kent, will choose the best remix, which will appear as a B-side to a future ODB single. The winner will also receive prizes such as Pro Keds sneakers, State Property clothing and a subscription to Scratch magazine.

The finished version of "Dirty Dirty" sports a guest spot by MC Rhymefest and production by Mark Ronson. Although it already appeared on the mix album "Osirus" earlier this year, it will be available for free download from the DDMG Web site for fans that purchase ODB's "A Son Unique," due June 21.

Although the album's track list is not yet confirmed, RZA told Billboard.com in February that about five tracks on which he collaborated with ODB will likely make the final cut, including "The Stomp Part 2," on which ODB "got a chance to be his crazy self."

"I also helped guide tracks produced by other people," RZA said. "I think we may end up with a 13- to 16-cut album, so you'll have about 35% of that Wu flavor, that abstract noise, you know what I mean? The songs I did with him -- if anything makes it to the radio, I'll be surprised." Other producers lending a hand on the set include the Neptunes, Just Blaze and DJ Premier.

The RZA-produced album track "Intoxicated," which features Method Man, Raekwon and Macy Gray, was recently serviced to U.S. radio outlets for airplay consideration.
